

Taking Safety Culture to the Next Degree

Description

Within high performing teams resides a critical mass of team energy which feeds continuous improvement and organizational advancement. Momentum must be created, developed, and deployed with strategies which perfectly align with organizational visions, missions, and goals. This presentation will help identify the critical elements necessary to take your safety culture to the next degree. Each participant learns how to recognize the different needs, values, and motivations of others and becomes competent in critical safety communications. Attitude, communications, and teamwork are the cornerstones of this programs success. The typical results are teams who are more open to safety accountability and communicate with leaders and managers with less barriers and negative agendas. The training will identify common ground for all team members from the most experienced to the newest on board. This strategic approach to development will often times be the game changer that teams are looking for to take their safety culture to the next degree.

Thomas Evans, CEO and founder of Training Logic, Inc., started his training career over thirty years ago with the Dale Carnegie Training Systems. In 1988, he accepted a National Training Manager position with Willamette Industries, a diversified wood products company with more than 14,000 employees. Thomas was responsible for the design and delivery of multi-level soft-skills training programs and Leadership succession development across the nation. Thomas has earned many training certifications through the years including a Master Trainer Certification from Development Dimensions International.

In 2002, he founded Training Logic, a training organization which employs a wide array of skilled and experienced trainers who have extensive expertise in the corporate environment. In 2006, Training Logic added a safety division, Safety Logic, extending safety training to the workforce, specializing in helping companies develop injury free cultures. Training Logic is an OSHA Authorized Outreach training provider in General Industry and Construction.

Thomas and his team provide training to many companies in our industry including Graphic Packaging, Weyerhaeuser Company, Georgia Pacific, RockTenn, Boise Cascade, International Paper, as well as companies in other business sectors.